MATT BURKE, SPORTS EDITOR

We strive for perfection in Boston, so it's OK to complain about TV networks putting our elite sports teams in less-than-ideal time slots. We had to buy new batteries for the remote on Sunday night as the Red Sox went head-to-head with the Patriots. We'll have a different but similarly annoying problem today as the Red Sox game will start at 5 p.m., just in time for rush hour. And just as the Red Sox game will be wrapping up around 8 p.m. tonight, the Celtics will be starting their greatly anticipated 2018-19 season. Yup, Boston problems. SAUDIS ABOUT TO CHANGE
JOURNALIST STORY: CNN

President Donald Trump speculated on Monday that "rogue killers" may have been behind the disappearance of prominent Saudi journalist Jamal Khashoggi and dispatched Secretary of State Mike Pompeo to meet King Salman over the case. Khashoggi, a U.S. resident, Washington Post columnist and leading critic of the powerful Saudi crown prince, Mohammed bin Salman, vanished after entering the Saudi consulate in Istanbul two weeks ago to get marriage documents. Turkish officials say they believe he was murdered there and his body removed. Saudi Arabia is preparing a report that would say Khashoggi was killed as the result of an interrogation that went wrong, CNN reported on Monday, citing two unidentified sources. The Saudi government could not immediately be reached for comment on the CNN report. The New York Times, citing a person familiar with the Saudi plans, reported that Prince Mohammed bin Salman had approved an interrogation or rendition of Khashoggi back to Saudi Arabia. The Saudi government, it said, would shield the prince by blaming an intelligence official for the botched operation.

SEX ABUSE SUIT FILED AGAINST FESSENDEN

Two former students of the Fessenden School west of Boston have filed a lawsuit seeking compensation for the alleged sexual abuse they suffered by employees of the all-boys boarding school in the 1960s and 1970s. The lawsuit was recently filed in Middlesex County Superior Court on behalf of two former Fessenden School students: John Sweeney, who now lives in Connecticut, and William A. Greaves II, who now lives in Norfolk. The plaintiffs allege that Fessenden officials, including the headmaster, assistant headmaster, and director of residential life were negligently hired, trained and supervised. These employees knew, or should have known, about the abuse, the lawsuit alleges, and were thus not fit to be around adolescent boys. Sweeney says in the lawsuit that the abuse occurred while he was attending the Fessenden School from 1969 to 1972, starting when he was 11 years old. Sweeney alleges that Assistant Headmaster Arthur P. Clarridge drugged and raped him in his dorm room, and then "pursued and sexually harassed him" during Sweeney's remaining time at Fessenden.

DEMONSTRATORS RESPOND TO LAWSUIT
AGAINST HARVARD'S ADMISSIONS PRACTICES

3 Demonstrators against Harvard University's admissions process hold signs while gathering during a protest at Copley Square in Boston, Massachusetts, on Sunday, Oct. 14. Harvard University was sued by a group that claims its law school illegally used race and gender as criteria for selecting law students to staff its most elite academic journals, a suit that comes amid growing scrutiny of affirmative action in college admissions.

MICROSOFT CO-FOUNDER
PAUL ALLEN DIES AT 65

4 Microsoft Corp. co-founder Paul Allen, who had been suffering from non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, a form of cancer, passed away at the age of 65 on Monday, his family said. Allen had said earlier this month that he had started treatment for non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, the same type of cancer he overcame nine years ago. Born in Seattle, Allen attended Washington State University for two years before dropping out to co-found Microsoft in 1975 with Bill Gates, a friend of his from high school. Allen, who left Microsoft in 1983, set up investment firm

Vulcan Inc. in 1986 to manage his multibillion-dollar portfolio. "Paul Allen's contributions to our company, our industry and to our community are indispensable," Microsoft Chief Executive Officer Satya Nadella said in a statement. "As co-founder of Microsoft, in his own quiet and persistent way, he created magical products, experiences and institutions, and in doing so, he changed the world." Allen, who ranked 44th on Forbes magazine's 2018 list of billionaires with a $20.5 billion fortune, was a major benefactor in Seattle, funding everything from libraries and universities to brain research.

SEARS FILES FOR
CHAPTER 11 BANKRUPTCY

5 Sears Holdings Corp. filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy on Monday with a plan to close about 142 of its 700 stores by the end of the year, throwing into doubt the future of the century-old retailer that once dominated U.S. malls but has withered in the age of internet shopping. The bankruptcy filing to reorganize debts of the parent of Sears, Roebuck & Co. and Kmart Corp. follows a decade of revenue declines, hundreds of store closures, and years of deals by billionaire Eddie Lampert in an attempt to turn around the company he acquired in 2005 for $11 billion. Lampert, who stepped down as Sears CEO on Monday but will remain chairman, had pledged to restore Sears to its glory days, when it owned the tallest building in the world and companies that included a radio station and Allstate insurance. But the company, which has close to 70,000 employees, has not turned a profit since 2011, and critics say Lampert let the stores deteriorate over the years, even as he bought the company's stock and lent it money, making him its largest shareholder and creditor.

MIT to invest $1B in studying advancements, ethics of AI

The university's new College of Computing will mark its biggest structural change in decades.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology announced on Monday a $1 billion commitment to study breakthroughs in artificial intelligence and their ethical impacts through the new MIT Stephen A. Schwarzman College of Computing.

The school will be a hub for work in computer science, AI, data science and related fields, officials said, as well as exploring how these technologies can be used to improve the world.

ISTOCK

The college will be located in a new building on MIT's Cambridge campus. Stephen A. Schwarzman, CEO and co-founder of investment firm Blackstone, gifted $350 million toward the venture.

The $1 billion total price tag marks the "single largest investment in computing and AI by an American academic institution," according to MIT. Officials say this investment will help the United States become and remain a world leader in preparing for the "rapid evolution" of computing and AI.

"There is no more important opportunity or challenge facing our nation than to responsibly harness the power of artificial intelligence so that we remain competitive globally and achieve breakthroughs that will improve our entire society," Schwarzman said in a statement.

"As one of the world leaders in technological innovation, MIT has the right expertise and the right values to serve as the 'true north' of AI in pursuit of the answers we urgently need," he added. "Our hope is that this ambitious initiative serves as a clarion call to our government that massive financial investment in AI is necessary to ensure that America has a leading voice in shaping the future of these powerful and transformative technologies."

The MIT Schwarzman College of Computing is set to open September 2019. The construction of the new campus building for the college is scheduled to be completed in 2022.

This new college is the "most significant structural change to MIT since the early 1950s," according to the university. It will create 50 new faculty positions and focus on teaching students in every educational discipline to use and develop AI with the grand goal of "making a better world."

Officials say the college will also serve as the connecting point for the five MIT schools so they can collaborate on AI education, research and innovation.

By focusing on the ethics of AI and advancing technologies, MIT hopes this effort will ease public concerns about what the future will bring.

"Computing is no longer the domain of the experts alone. It's everywhere, and it needs to be understood and mastered by almost everyone. In that context, for a host of reasons, society is uneasy about technology — and at MIT, that's a signal we must take very seriously," MIT President L. Rafael Reif said in a statement.

Warren, mocked by Trump as 'Pocahontas,' cites DNA test

Democratic Sen. Elizabeth Warren, whom U.S. President Donald Trump has ridiculed as "Pocahontas" for claiming Native American heritage, lashed back on Monday, citing DNA evidence she said supports her assertion, in what could be a preview of a bare-knuckles presidential campaign in 2020.

For years, Trump, a Republican, has mocked the Massachusetts lawmaker's assertion that she has Native American ancestry, calling her "fake Pocahontas" at political rallies.

In Montana in July, Trump said, "I will give you a million dollars to your favorite charity, paid for by Trump, if you take the test and it shows you're an Indian."

On Monday, Warren, a former Harvard Law School professor, released the results of a DNA test that offers "strong evidence" that she does have Native American heritage, though only a small amount and going back many generations.

Warren also sent a series of Twitter attacks against Trump that called him out on his pledge, saying, "Please send the check to the National Indigenous Women's Resource Center."

Trump denied having made the dare. "I didn't say that," he said as he left Washington to visit hurricane-stricken areas of Florida and Georgia.

In response, Warren posted a video of his remarks in Montana on Twitter with the caption, "This is what lying looks like."

She asked, "Having some memory problems, @realDonaldTrump? Should we call for a doctor?"

"Here's something you won't 'forget,' Mr. President: You're the least popular president in modern history & your allies will go down hard in the midterm elections. 22 days. Tick-tock."

Warren, who clashed repeatedly with Trump during the 2016 presidential campaign, is widely seen as a likely challenger to Trump when he runs for re-election in 2020. The statement on her DNA test was accompanied by a website that includes videos and testimonials about her past and heritage.

Like many Americans, Warren has said that she

"Having some memory problems
@realDonaldTrump?"

Sen. Elizabeth Warren

learned about her ethnic and cultural heritage from her parents.

"When I decided to run for Senate in 2012, I never thought that my family's Native American heritage would come under attack and my dead parents would be called liars," she said. "And I never expected the president of the United States to use my family's story as a racist political joke."

The analysis of Warren's DNA was done by Carlos Bustamante, a Stanford University professor. He concluded that most of the senator's DNA shows European ancestry, but that it has a Native American segment. Warren has said that her Native American ancestry possibly goes back to the 1700s, including Cherokee blood on her mother's side, according to family lore.

Class is in session with 'T-Pain's School of Business'

We spoke with the singer and entrepreneur about his new show on FUSE.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

Sometimes, the biggest hurdle in the way of achieving success is that little voice in the back of your head telling you that your unique ideas are not worthwhile. For every great startup that revolutionizes an industry, there are countless that are never funded because the person who came up with the idea never took the chance and jumped into the ball pit. Singer and entrepreneur T-Pain will be treated kindly by history as someone

Pretty much the idea behind the new show was seeing what entrepreneurs have to really go through to get their businesses off the ground. I don't think a lot of people know the process and they just think that you come up with a good idea and then you just make a lot of money. People don't think about the failures and the trials and tribulations and things you have to go through to really have a successful business. We're showing the world it's more than a good idea and a big check. Even if you're afraid of your big idea — if it's stupid but it works, then it's not stupid. We're just trying to show you the positives of getting over that hump. You may have a great idea that's sitting in your head right now but you may think it's stupid. So, here's what other people are going through. When people hear the name "School of Business," they think, "Is this going to be T-Pain saying how much he knows about business more than everybody else?" And it's really not that. It's very encouraging to young entrepreneurs and showing people to just try everything and do anything you want. If it doesn't work, try something else. It's basically a motivational show and very important, in my opinion.

You could interpret the "School" in the title of your show as you going to business school.

The best kind of teachers learn from their students as well. So it's always great to go into a business or into a class knowing that you don't know everything and you can always learn more. We grew up with this idea that teachers were the smartest people in the world. That's why they're teachers.

They know everything [laughs]. That's just the most untrue thing we grew up thinking. We make these people go to school for four to seven years to get all of the answers in the book. If we're all gonna learn together then take away the cheat sheet for the teachers and let's all learn together. Everybody's learning at the same time! I'm learning, the people who are watching are learning, and I'm giving my experiences to the people I'm talking to. So literally everybody involved is learning.

Have startups always been something that have sparked your curiosity?

Yeah, I've always been [curious]. I've always just done random Kickstarters. I believe in projects and how people get started and stuff like that. If I spend two grand on your project and if my push can help you out and can get me your product for free before everybody else, then hell, yeah. I'm with you!

Is it safe to say that "innovation" is one of your biggest driving factors?

Yeah, that's what it's all about, man. It's about taking risks. When I see someone doing that for an idea they believe in, I'm automatically drawn to that thing. I want to see it all pan out because I know how much money can be made off of a new idea that might seem silly at first, but then ... oh boy. Then you see all the people who said it was silly wish they could help it out and back it. I try not to miss any opportunities like that. I've definitely learned that for sure.

What would be your biggest advice for someone who is looking to follow their dreams?

My main advice to everybody all of the time is don't listen to anybody else. If everybody else knew what a good idea was, they would have made it first. Go ahead and do what you're thinking. If it turns out bad, then do the other thing that you were thinking. Everybody has these ideas but they always get to that point of "Ah, I'm not going to do that. That'll be stupid. Nobody is gonna buy that." It's that point where you go past that and you just do it anyways, that's when it comes into fruition and you start making a ton of f—ing money. That's just how it is. Don't listen to anyone around you, just get past that point. Even people that you respect. When I got in the game and I started producing, all of these producers like Timbaland and people that I really respected, they told me that my beats was whack. You know what I'm saying? I made all of the beats on my first three albums and two of them went gold and one of them went platinum. I'm fine with not listening to anyone around me.

"T-Pain's School of Business" premieres on Oct. 16 at 11 p.m. on FUSE.

'Charmed' star understands the controversy surrounding the reboot

Madeleine Mantock is grateful for Shannen Doherty and Rose McGowan's recent support.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

When it comes to the controversy surrounding the "Charmed" remake, Madeleine Mantock admits that the initial description for it should have been worded better.

"In the starting of the reboot, when it was announced, maybe better words could have been used to describe it, which is something that Jennie [Snyder Urman] has said herself," Mantock says. "They started out by calling it a feminist reboot. Not trying to denote that the other wasn't. But people said that it was a barb against the original."

"I think now that people are realizing that we meant both are," she adds. "In that regard we haven't spoken to anyone personally [from the original cast], but I have seen the positive support they have offered and I am really grateful for it."

But while Mantock has yet to speak to any of the previous cast members, which included Holly Marie Combs, Shannen Doherty, Alyssa Milano and Rose McGowan, she did insist that she's "grateful" for Doherty and McGowan's recent support for the reboot.

"I haven't, no. I haven't spoken to any of them. I think the main connection we have had, they have been so lovely tock. "It felt like the page had turned and they were expressing that this could be something great for a new generation. And if we can give even just a little bit of what they meant to people starting back in 1998, then that is a good thing. That is what we want to do."

It turns out, though, that Mantock herself was never actually a devout fan of the original "Charmed," as she confessed: "I definitely remember it. I think it was my brother that watched it."

"I knew what the characters looked like, I knew their names, there were elements of the show that I knew. I knew they were all sisters. And their names and I am so grateful for the positive feedback from both Rose and Shannen, showing us our support," says Man-began with the letter 'P.' I was definitely aware of it. But not enough to call myself a fan," says Mantock. "Most people are, because it was such a huge entity. There's no other show that I can remember where I am not sure if I have watched a full episode, and I know what it is about, so it speaks to the huge, pop culture moment it had that people do."

"People went to it for fashion, for all sorts of things. It sparked a real interest in people and kept people watching for eight seasons because it brought something new. There were three females at its forefront — that wasn't the norm at the time," she adds. "After we were cast, me and Mel went back to watch the pilot. Because we were told that in our pilot script there were a few call-backs to what they had done. So I wanted to see it so I could pay homage to what they had done."

But while Diaz and Mantock might not have watched the original episodes when they aired, "Charmed"'s new showrunner, Jennie Snyder Urman, made sure to surround herself with writers and creatives that were die-hard fans.

"Jennie is so brilliant. She has a brilliant mind. She is so precise and quick. I feel really grateful that we have her," says Mantock. "The team that she has assembled, we have Jessica O'Toole and Amy Rardin, who worked on 'Jane the Virgin' with her, and she picked them to write the show. [They] have been friends since they were 12 and were mega-fans of the original."

She adds, "They have the well of information and passion that we turn to."

ASK MOUNT SINAI

Stay Healthy

You have medical questions? We have answers. Metro is teaming up with the experts at the esteemed Mt. Sinai hospital to provide answers to New Yorkers' most pressing medical concerns. Send us an email at askmtnsinai@metro.us. We'll select one question and publish an answer every other week.

Pink is everywhere, which is your clue that October is Breast Cancer Awareness Month. What many people might not be aware of is how much information about breast cancer treatment is outdated or false. We talked to Dr. J. Jaime Alberty-Oller, surgical breast oncologist at The Dubin Breast Center of the Tisch Cancer Institute at Mount Sinai in New York to help separate fact from fiction.

Do breast cancer surgeries and biopsies cause cancer to spread?
This is one of the questions that patients ask about most often when first diagnosed, leading to a lot of anxiety right from the start. Patients should know that it is largely a myth that exposure to healthy surrounding tissue (during a needle biopsy) or to the air in an operating room (during surgery) will cause cancer to spread. Medical evidence suggests that "tumor seeding," or spreading, is unlikely.

Does everyone at high risk of breast cancer need a mastectomy?

Most patients at high risk of breast cancer will not need surgery. Patients who test positive for certain genetic mutations (such as BRCA 1 and BRCA 2), however, may benefit from risk-reducing surgery, since their chance of developing breast cancer is much higher than an average woman's.

Can a lumpectomy be as effective or more effective than a mastectomy?

Most patients diagnosed with breast cancer will be able to choose between a lumpectomy (where only the cancer is removed with a rim of normal breast tissue around it) and a mastectomy (where all of the breast tissue is removed). Both are equally effective in terms of how well patients do in the long run. Some women, unfortunately, will not be candidates for a lumpectomy if, for example, their cancer is too big or if they have more than one cancer in their breast.

What about developing breast cancer if you have a preventive mastectomy?

After a mastectomy, the chances of a recurrence (or the cancer returning) are indeed lower when compared to a lumpectomy — but they are still not zero. Some patients think that by getting double mastectomies, they will not have to worry about developing breast cancer in the future. Unfortunately, that is not the case, as cancer may happen from only one microscopic breast cell that is left behind. This is why it is so important for patients to get regular physical examinations from their doctors, especially after undergoing a mastectomy. Your doctor will let you know how often to get examined.

Dental Research Study: Tooth Wear (Cervical Lesions)

We are seeking volunteers for a study comparing two materials used to repair wear, or cervical lesions that may occur on your teeth over time. Both materials are approved by the FDA to be used to repair cervical lesions.

You may qualify to participate if you:

- Are at least 18 years of age
- Have at least 2 teeth with cervical lesions in need of dental treatment
- Are willing and able to have dental x-rays or photographs taken of your teeth
- Are not pregnant or breastfeeding
- Have a known allergy to numbing agents or tooth-colored filling materials

There are a total of 4 study visits over 18 months. Qualifying participants will receive the two fillings free of charge, and a total of $175 in Target gift cards if you complete all study visits. All study visits take place at Tufts University School of Dental Medicine.

If you think you may qualify, please contact Dental Research Administration at 617-636-3865 for more information.

No room for error in Houston

The Sox are 2-0 on the road so far this postseason, but Houston is a different animal.

MATT BURKE
matthew.burke@metro.us

The Red Sox will have to win at least one game in Houston in the next three days to survive in the 2018 ALCS. After a 108-win season and a four-game takedown of the hated Yankees in which they won two games on the road, beating the Astros in Texas is certainly doable.

That said, the Astros certainly seem to pose a bigger challenge to the Sox than the Yankees did. That narrative starts with Houston's starting staff, which will trot out Dallas Keuchel in Game 3 Tuesday afternoon (5:09 p.m., TBS). Keuchel is a former Cy Young Award winner (2015), but his dominance has tapered off in recent seasons. The lefty went just 12-11 this season with a 3.74 ERA.

He was roughed up in his lone start against the Sox this season back on Sept. 9 at Fenway as Xander Bogaerts, Mookie Betts and JD Martinez did considerable damage. Keuchel coughed up five earned runs on nine hits in 6.0 innings in that one, the highlight for the Red Sox coming when Martinez ripped a three-run homer over the Green Monster.

The Red Sox's starter for Game 3 is also shaky, however, as Nathan Eovaldi was surely sad to see the Yankees go. Eovaldi was the Sox's Yankee-killer this season but didn't fare quite as well against non-pinstripe-wearing teams.

Eovaldi did not face the Astros as a member of the Red Sox this season

Closer Craig Kimbrel has been shaky out of the bullpen so far this postseason. GETTY IMAGES

but he did see them earlier this year, when he was still pitching for the Rays. Back on June 20 at Houston, Eovaldi allowed four home runs to the Astros' big guns as Jose Altuve bashed a pair of dingers and George Springer and Alex Bregman each clouted solo shots. Eovaldi took the loss in that outing, surrendering seven hits in six innings of work.

Sick ace, shaky closer

When the 2018 Red Sox were clicking on all cylinders, ace Chris Sale and closer Craig Kimbrel were each dominant. But in this postseason there have been serious questions surrounding both players.

Sale spent Sunday night at Mass General and was kept overnight for what the team dubbed a "stomach illness." The lefty certainly did not look right in his Game 1 start as he threw more balls (31) than strikes (29) in his first 60 pitches and walked four batters total. His velocity was again down in Game 1 as his fastball averaged 92 mph. His fastball normally hovers around 98 mph.

As for Kimbrel, his issues appear to be more mental than physical. This is the second straight postseason the Sox's closer has been shaky, as in his last five playoff appearances he has a 6.36 ERA.

Sunday night's Kimbrel appearance was another journey despite him recording another save. George Springer doubled off of Kimbrel and he was able to move to third on a Kimbrel wild pitch. Altuve singled home Springer before Kimbrel eventually got Bregman to record the final out of the ballgame.

2018-19 Celtics season preview

An NBA Finals trip seems like a near lock for the talented C's.

JULIAN EDLOW
sports@metro.us

After a disappointing 1-3 preseason record, meaningful Celtics basketball is finally upon us. What an offseason it's been, mostly consisting of waiting to finally see this roster as it was intended. So what can we expect from this healthy Celtics team as it's assembled for the 2018-19 season? Below are the five biggest questions this season holds.

1. Limitations on Kyrie, Hayward?

While this talented core took a LeBron James-led Cavaliers team to Game 7 of the Eastern Conference Finals last season without its two prized offseason acquisitions, it's clear that a healthy Irving and Hayward are necessary for this team to reach its ceiling.

Irving was spectacular in the 60 games he did appear in last season, essentially averaging a 24-5-4 line in 32 minutes. Hayward was lost just five minutes into the season with a gruesome leg injury, but his All-Star-level talent and versatility will be a welcomed skill set on both ends for Brad Stevens.

The question is, how healthy are both of these guys? Irving had some hardware removed from his knee in the offseason, dating back to a fractured knee cap suffered during the 2015 NBA Finals. Hayward, while close to fully recovered from his leg injury, has plenty of rust to shake off.

2. What's Tatum's ceiling?

The No. 3 overall pick in the 2017 NBA Draft immediately exceeded expectations, showing veteran polish to his game right from the start. Injuries thrust Tatum into a larger role than anyone expected from the rookie, but he continued to prove capable of every challenge thrown in front of him.

Tatum's 14 points and five boards per game during 80 regular season outings (all of which he started) turned out to be just an appetizer for what was to come in the postseason. Tatum was the Celtics' best pure scorer in the playoffs, averaging 18.5 points, while also upping his play-making skills with 2.7 assists.

Kyrie is the go-to guy on this team for now, but Tatum's developments have most of us thinking it won't be long before the C's have two of the best scorers in the NBA. Tatum spent his summer working out with the likes of Kobe Bryant and Kevin Durant, so to answer the initial question, Jayson Tatum's ceiling is as high as any young player in the NBA.

3. Deep bench

It's wild to think that some of the very same players who were considered stars during last year's postseason run will now transition to bench roles. The Celtics are crazy-deep this season, and they know it.

Marcus Morris deemed the Celts' bench "B.W.A." on media day — Bench With Attitude — a nickname that's sure to stick around all season. It's far from just a catchy name, though. This is by far the fieriest bench the league has to offer.

Between Morris, Marcus Smart, Terry Rozier, and Aron Baynes, Stevens will be running at least nine deep every night. On top of that, young options like Semi Ojeleye, Guerschon Yabusele and Robert Williams will all be mixed in on nights Boston decides to rest some stars, and we can't forget about the return of a healthy Daniel Theis. Not only will Irving and Hayward be able to have off-nights for their health, but veteran big man Al Horford should have the luxury of some rest as well.

Assuming the Celtics don't have any serious health issues this season, the biggest issue with the bench could simply be Stevens finding enough minutes for all the talent he has.

4. The Stevens factor

This will be the most moving pieces Stevens will have to deal with in his NBA career, and how he decides to balance rest/egos/minutes/rotations during the regular season is going to be telling. Stevens has passed every test put in front of him entering his sixth season in Boston. Now it's time to see if he can drive the car to the finish line of the postseason rather than the regular season.

5. Finals-bound?

While the Warriors are heavy favorites in Vegas to complete the three-peat, Boston's a significant frontrunner to prevail in the East. Sure, the Sixers are an up-and-coming young team, but they don't have the veteran star presence the Celtics do. The Raptors pushed all their chips to the middle of the table by swapping DeMar DeRozan for Kawhi Leonard, but that's too much of an unknown at this time.

Of course, the major factor here is that LeBron went Hollywood on us and packed his bags for L.A. That means that a non-LeBron team will represent the East in the NBA Finals for the first time since the 2010 Celtics lost to the Lakers in seven games.

One look at the landscape of the league and the firepower of this lineup makes the answer easy. The Boston Celtics are headed to the 2019 NBA Finals.

- Aries Put your head down, push forward and don't stop until you are satisfied with the results you get. Your drive and determination will ward off criticism.
- Taurus Take control and do your own thing. The ideas you have and the changes you make will be well-received. A partnership will help raise your profile and your success rate.
- Gemini Jealousy will not help you get ahead, but hard work, dedication and a positive attitude will. Don't stop until you have accomplished what you set out to do.
- Cancer You'll be able to initiate a change that will bring you closer to people you want to work alongside or those you love and want to spend more time with.
- Leo Listen to complaints and do what you can to keep the peace, but don't give in to anyone using emotional tactics to throw you off track. Your reputation will be at risk.
- Virgo Someone will offer you a different perspective that will help you see the possibilities that are within reach. If you share in the conversation, a unique partnership will develop.

- Libra Make the most of your day. Don't wait for others to take charge when you should be applying your skills and putting forth the effort to turn your ideas into reality.
- Scorpio If you are resourceful and disciplined, rewards will be forthcoming. Refuse to give in to pressure or stress caused by someone acting aggressively or indulgently.
- Sagittarius Help yourself before you help others or you will end up getting taken advantage of by someone eager to hand you responsibilities that he or she doesn't want.
- Capricorn Look for an opening to present and promote what you have to offer. An unusual deal will turn out to be prosperous if you add your own unique touch.
- Aquarius Take care of personal matters, pending settlements, contracts or anything else that can affect your financial standing. Protect against loss, minor injury and excessive or inappropriate behavior.
- Pisces The changes you make will take others by surprise. A chance to use your skills in a unique way will open doors to new beginnings. Love and romance are on the rise. EUGENIA LAST
